Brent Steiner is an expert in digital branding and emerging technologies for real estate. His insights help companies make their existing data more accessible, more relevant and more valuable as a resource for driving revenue and increasing ROI. At Engrain, where he is founder and CEO, his extensive background in graphic design, user experience optimization and property marketing take physical form in the company's award-winning TouchTour product line.

Brent is a sought-after speaker and panelist whose presentations introduce new touch technology to national audiences and inject new ideas into the broader conversation on how to help businesses succeed in the digital economy. As a leading proponent of interactive, real-time data visualization capabilities, he is constantly exploring new ways to advance the technology and help companies capitalize on it.

Brent is also an expert in e-publishing. Ripple, Inc., which he founded and where he now serves as an advisor, produces the Ripple Reader that is used to create children's e-books with user-recorded audio.
